The A-CAPP Center Student Program encompasses a variety of leveled programs that reflect our multidisciplinary approach to the problem of product counterfeiting.

Students are exposed to research on brand protection and anti-counterfeiting, outreach projects, education projects and more to integrate them into the work of the Center, while providing them the skills and experience to make them competitive in their future endeavors, whether in industry, academic, law enforcement or others.

A-CAPP Center students have graduated and become brand protection specialists, anti-counterfeiting technology specialists, intellectual property lawyers, academics, security analysts and more.

This unique student experience is open to undergraduate, graduate, and professional students from any discipline on MSU’s campus.
