

The Brand Protection Professional: A Practitioner's Journal (BPP) is a quarterly resource dedicated to reporting on brand protection issues, research and professional information for in-house brand protection practitioners. The BPP aims to advance brand protection through the establishment of an accessible, comprehensive forum containing essential information for the brand protection community.

"As a derivative of a leading university center in anti-counterfeiting and product protection, The BPP has unique access to world-class research, education and outreach capabilities. But, uniquely positioned as an industry journal, The Brand Protection Professional is written exclusively for the in-house brand protection community."

Leah Evert-Burks, Managing Editor
